

Everyday wonders: architecture as the loved backdrop of life

Modernist ideology conceived architectural design as a mere operation of data collecting processed through a step-by-step “method” where the final form was the mechanical result of a correct process. Even if extremely attentive to all functional issues, we believe a good design should be much more than that: through a deep interpretation of the given theme and a dialogue with the client, it should generate a pleasant environment for everyday life, enhancing human relations by expressing a sense of place and “character” to the people who live and visit it in time.
